

Night fishing in the Saint Lucie River

Written by

Wednesday, 08 December 2010 16:54 - Last Updated Thursday, 09 December 2010 05:31

---

We took a trip out a couple of days before Thanksgiving, and thought we would see how the evening snook bite was doing.♦♦ We headed out at about six pm with some light tackle rods, some lures and live shrimp.♦ The tide was completely low and just begining to creep in.♦ The moon hadn't made it up quite yet so it was pretty dark out.♦The mullet run had since ceased, and the the night time action has definately changed.♦ We were not seeing the snook like we had.♦ The mullet have moved up into warmer waters.♦ We did start to see some action as the tide progressed.♦♦ We ended up with about six snook that night and a bonnet head shark. Most of them on a artificials like the repalla and some DOA swim baits.♦ I have to say the green lights produced for us this time.♦ Although we did catch a couple under the regular lights. We fished until the tide turned to go out and had a great time. ♦ ♦ ♦ 